A Two-day International Conference on Social Sciences, Languages and Culture
ICSSLC'23

12 &13 October 2023

About the Conference

Languages, Social Sciences, and Culture play pivotal roles in shaping our world and understanding the complexities of human existence. Languages serve as powerful vehicles of communication, enabling us to express our thoughts, share ideas, and bridge cultural divides. Social Sciences provide insights into the dynamics of societies, economies, politics, and relationships, contributing to informed decision-making and social progress. Culture encompasses the vibrant tapestry that reflects our shared experiences, identities, and heritage.

Understanding the importance of Languages, Social Sciences, and Culture is crucial in addressing global challenges, promoting inclusivity, and embracing diversity. Therefore, the International Conference on Languages, Social Sciences, and Culture recognizes the significance of these fields and aims to achieve the following objectives:

➢ To enhance cross-cultural understanding by facilitating discussions on language, social dynamics, cultural practices, and their interconnectedness in a globalized world.

➢ To provide a platform for researchers to publish, enabling them to disseminate knowledge and research outcomes.

➢ To promote interdisciplinary dialogue and engagement for scholars and researchers from diverse backgrounds.

Join us for the Two-day International Conference on Languages, Social Sciences, and Culture (ICSSLC'23) to explore the fascinating intersections and contribute to the knowledge repository in these vital fields.
